According to statistics from Zero2IPO Database, China's M&A market saw the completion of 48 deals in February 2013, including 45 with the amounts disclosed totaling US$25.75B, or US$572.00M on average. Affected by the Chinese Spring Festival, the number of M&A deals in domestic market fell by 44.8% from January, but the amount of deals surged by 790.4% month-on-month, which was attributed to several big M&A deals that occurred in February, such as CNOOC's acquisition of Nexen at a price of US$15.10B.

In terms of policies and industrial orientation, the Ministry of Health released the newly revised Good Supply Practice for Pharmaceutical Products (the new "GSP") on February 16, 2013, which raises the requirements on enterprise operation and implements effective control over drug quality from production to sale. This will help improve the current situation in which drug circulation enterprises vary greatly from each other in operation quality and the procurement and sales channels are not transparent, and solve the problems related to drug enterprises, such as non-compliant operation and chaotic bill management.
