

[ PRA CIRCULAR NO. 005, S. 2018, September 19, 2018 ]

POLICY GUIDELINES ON THE NON-REFUNDABILITY OF ANNUAL PRA FEE (APF)

*Adopted: 06 September 2018
Date Filed: 19 September 2018*

To qualify for the SRR Visa a retiree-applicant has to remit the required visa deposit the amount of which varies, depending on the SRRV scheme the applicant intends to enroll such as:

SCHEME	DEPOSIT	AGE
Smile	$20,000	35-49 y/o
Classic	$50,000	35-49 y/o
	$10,000 (with pension)	50 y/o & above
	$20,000 (without pension)
Human Touch	$10,000	35 y/o & above
Courtesy	$1,500	35 y/o & above

Apart from the qualifying visa deposit, an applicant for SRR Visa is required to pay (in addition to the application fee), the Annual PRA Fee (APF) of $360 which covers the principal applicant plus two (2) dependents. For every additional dependent, an additional $100 is needed.

There are instances when right after obtaining the SRR Visa, a member decides to withdraw from the program with a request for the release of the visa deposit and a portion of the APF when the termination of membership happens within the same year the said fee is paid.

Cognizant of the fact that a member starts enjoying the privileges of the SRRV upon issuance of the same visa and payment of the APF, nevertheless it becomes preposterous to refund the APF when the member voluntarily decides to terminate the PRA membership.

To allow such refund, would amount to treating the SRRV a worthless tangible object notwithstanding its usefulness as a privilege to reside permanently in the Philippines.

For this reason and considering the various benefits enjoyed by a SRR Visa holder (no matter how short his stint in the program), PRA shall in no case allow the
