[ G.R. No. 114849, August 24, 1998 ]

PEOPLE OF THE PHILIPPINES, PLAINTIFF-APPELLEE, VS. ALVIN IGNACIO Y JOCON, ACCUSED-APPELLANT.

DECISION

ROMERO, J.:

How much suffering can a seven-year old child, sexually victimized by a much older man, endure? No one can really answer this with certainty for it requires entering the mind, perhaps, even the soul, of the tortured child. The offense rarely leaves any tangible trace of injury, but what it does to the victim's mental and emotional well-being goes beyond any imaginable horror which will scar her indelibly for the rest of her lifetime.

The Ignacios and Diños were living peacefully under one roof until March 30, 1993, when seven-year old April Diño was sexually abused by accused-appellant Alvin Ignacio. April testified that on that fateful day, she was asked by her grandmother Myrna to call her Aunt Marilu. As the latter was taking an afternoon nap, April knocked on the door, but Alvin suddenly pulled her into his adjacent room. He pulled down her shorts and panty, unzipped his pants, laid her on the bed, lay on top of her, then mercilessly forced his manhood into her callow vulva. After ravishing her for some time, he casually pulled up her lower garments and warned her not to tell anybody about what had just occurred.

As fate would have it, however, she had to relate her ordeal to a grownup the following day, when Marilu confronted her about the bloody underwear discovered in the washroom. Marilu shared the information with April's "father" Ferdinand, and they listened to April's unwavering story, how she was raped by Alvin, then told to keep it a secret. They examined April and saw that she was still bleeding. April was then brought to the police while Ferdinand stayed in the house to ensure that Alvin would not leave the house. The responding officers questioned April and also inspected her private parts; they were likewise convinced that the young girl was raped. The same day, Alvin was arrested and detained at the police station pending investigation.

In the meantime, upon the request of the police, the National Bureau of Investigation subjected April to a medical and physical examination. Medico-Legal Officer Ruperto J. Sombilon, Jr. prepared a certification dated March 31, 1993, stating that he found April "to have fresh bleeding hymenal lacerations . . . . compatible to (sic) being sexually abused."<sup>[1]</sup>

The only evidence adduced by accused-appellant for his defense was the testimony of his brother Rufino Ignacio, Marilu's common-law spouse. Rufino claimed he was the true father of April and, as such, he was withdrawing the complaint against Alvin. April's birth certificate does state that her mother is Marilu Diño, but it fails to divulge the identity of her father, which is stated as "unknown." Furthermore, Marilu, testifying as rebuttal witness, disputed Rufino's allegation. She said that her brother Ferdinand agreed to raise April as his own child.

After weighing the evidence thus presented, Judge Bienvenido L. Reyes of the Regional Trial Court of Malabon, Branch 74, convinced of April Diño's sincerity and candor, accordingly rendered a judgment of conviction, to wit:

"WHEREFORE, in the light of the foregoing, and finding the accused ALVIN IGNACIO Y JOCON GUILTY BEYOND REASONABLE DOUBT OF THE FELONY OF RAPE, he is sentenced to suffer an imprisonment of RECLUSION PERPETUA. He is likewise (ordered) to indemnify the victim and her heirs the amount of THIRTY THOUSAND (P30,000.00) PESOS, as and by way of moral damages.

SO ORDERED."

On appeal, accused-appellant maintains his innocence and claims that at her tender age, "it is unbelievable that April could classify the incident as 'rape' without some previous preliminaries and instructions from some legally disposed minds." He then goes on to conclude that "April was well rehearsed on what to say and testify in (sic) the witness stand."<sup>[2]</sup>

This is shallow reasoning which fails to convince this Court that accused-appellant was wrongly convicted. The evidence pointing to his culpability, far from being insignificant as he insinuates, is so overwhelming, and even assaults on the procedure for his prosecution cannot defeat this conclusion. There is no question that April Diño was seven years old at the time she was sexually abused by accused-appellant on March 30, 1993. For all intents and purposes, this type of rape being statutory, no proof of involuntariness on the part of the victim is necessary as she is considered by law to be incapable of consenting to the sexual act. To convict the accused, the only circumstance that need be proved is the fact of intercourse.<sup>[3]</sup> This was amply demonstrated by the prosecution in the case at bar. As we reiterated in People v. Edualino,<sup>[4]</sup> "(a) person accused of rape can be convicted solely on the testimony of the victim provided the testimony is credible, natural, convincing and otherwise consistent with human nature and the course of things."<sup>[5]</sup>
