EXPLANATORY NOTE

(This note is not part of the rules but is intended to indicate their general purport.)

The Resident Magistrates (Allocation of Pension) Rules (Northern Ireland) 1962, under which a retiring Resident Magistrate may allocate part of his pension in favour of his wife or other beneficiary and a retired Resident Magistrate under the age of 70 who has married subsequent to retirement, may allocate part of his pension in favour of his wife, contained a restriction as to the minimum amount that could be allocated. The amending rules now made remove that restriction.

The amending rules also provide that the maximum fee payable in respect of an examination by a Medical Board shall be increased from £3 3s. 0d. to £6 6s. 0d.
