established civil servant who is entitled to a graduated National Insurance pension, where any of the graduated pension is attributable to service in the Civil Service, or to service in a former employment which is reckonable for determining the amount of his superannuation allowance. The amount of the reduction in respect of service in the Civil Service is equivalent to the amount of graduated pension attributable to such service, except in respect of service after age 65 (60 for women) where it may be less than the full equivalent. The reduction in respect of service in a former employment is on the basis of the system applicable to that former employment.
