EXPLANATORY NOTE

(This Note is not part of the Regulations, but is intended to indicate their general purport.)

These Regulations, which come into operation on 11th May, 1959, prescribe new standards of non-inflammability for textile fabrics to which the Fabrics (Misdescription) Act, 1913, applies, namely, textile fabrics to which is attributed the quality of non-inflammability or safety from fire or any degree of that quality.

The new standards, which have been formulated and published by the British Standards Institution, replace those prescribed in earlier Regulations made by the Lord Lieutenant of Ireland on 14th March, 1914, which are now revoked.
