

International Labour
Organization

▶ Working from home From invisibility to decent work

-
- ▶ Working from home
From invisibility
to decent work

Copyright © International Labour Organization 2021

First published 2021

Publications of the International Labour Office enjoy copyright under Protocol 2 of the Universal Copyright Convention. Nevertheless, short excerpts from them may be reproduced without authorization, on condition that the source is indicated. For rights of reproduction or translation, application should be made to ILO Publications (Rights and Licensing), International Labour Office, CH-1211 Geneva 22, Switzerland, or by email: rights@ilo.org. The International Labour Office welcomes such applications.

Libraries, institutions and other users registered with a reproduction rights organization may make copies in accordance with the licences issued to them for this purpose. Visit www.ifrro.org to find the reproduction rights organization in your country.

Working from home: From invisibility to decent work

International Labour Office - Geneva: ILO, 2021.

ISBN 978-92-2-033710-3 (print)

ISBN 978-92-2-033709-7 (web PDF)

work at home / decent work / COVID-19 / industry level / telework / service sector

13.02.2

ILO Cataloguing in Publication Data

The designations employed in ILO publications, which are in conformity with United Nations practice, and the presentation of material therein do not imply the expression of any opinion whatsoever on the part of the International Labour Office concerning the legal status of any country, area or territory or of its authorities, or concerning the delimitation of its frontiers.

The responsibility for opinions expressed in signed articles, studies and other contributions rests solely with their authors, and publication does not constitute an endorsement by the International Labour Office of the opinions expressed in them.

Reference to names of firms and commercial products and processes does not imply their endorsement by the International Labour Office, and any failure to mention a particular firm, commercial product or process is not a sign of disapproval.

Produced by the Publications Production Unit (PRODOC) of the ILO.

Graphic and typographic design, manuscript preparation, copy-editing, layout and composition, proofreading, printing, electronic publishing and distribution.

The ILO endeavours to use paper sourced from forests managed in an environmentally sustainable and socially responsible manner.

Code: DIN-ROS-PMSERV

©iStock/pictafolio

Contents

▶ Contents

Executive summary	8
▶ Chapter 1. Introduction	15
1.1 What is home work? What is home-based work?	17
1.2 Gender and home work	23
1.3 The objective and structure of the report	24
▶ Chapter 2. Measuring home work and home-based work	29
2.1 The difficulty of capturing home work in statistics	31
2.2 Identifying home-based work and home work in labour force surveys	36
2.3. Home-based workers around the world	40
2.4. Identified and probable homeworkers	60
2.5 Working from home and the COVID-19 pandemic	66
2.6 Conclusion	68
Annex 1. Surveys included in Chapter 2	72
Annex 2. Classification of countries/territories by income group (per capita gross national income)	76
Annex 3. Classification of countries/territories by region	77
Annex 4. Identifying homeworkers through labour force surveys	79
▶ Chapter 3. Home work in the production of goods: The putting-out system	83
3.1 The long and enduring history of home work	86
3.2 Contemporary industrial home work	90
3.3 A flexible form of production	96
3.4 Summary	103
▶ Chapter 4. Home work in services: Typists, turkers and teleworkers	109
4.1 Typists: Early home work in services	111
4.2 Turkers: Homeworking on digital labour platforms	115
4.3 Teleworkers	124
4.4 Conclusion	127

► Chapter 5. Working conditions of homeworkers	133
5.1 Occupations and earnings	135
5.2 Earnings and hours	141
5.3 Working time	146
5.4 Work-life balance: Relations between the work and family spheres	150
5.5 Home work and child labour	162
5.6 Social protection	164
5.7 Organizing and representation	167
5.8 Occupational safety and health for homeworkers	169
5.9 Training and career prospects for homeworkers	172
5.10 Conclusion	175
► Chapter 6. Legal protections for homeworkers	181
6.1 The adoption of ILO standards on home work	184
6.2 Homeworkers, employers and intermediaries: Scope of Convention No. 177	185
6.3 Adoption of a national policy on home work	187
6.4 Freedom of association and the right to collective bargaining	193
6.5 The elimination of child labour	197
6.6 Occupational safety and health	198
6.7 Working time	202
6.8. Remuneration	205
6.9 Termination of employment	209
6.10 Social security and maternity protection	211
6.11 Access to training	212
6.12 Supervision and enforcement measures	213
6.13 Summary	220
► Chapter 7. Towards decent work for homeworkers	237
7.1 Introduction	238
7.2 International governance and action	240
7.3 The importance of representation: Workers' organizations and cooperatives, employers' organizations and social dialogue	245
7.4 The role of governments	254
7.5 Conclusion	268
Bibliography	274
Acknowledgements	276

Figures

1.1	Working from home: The distinction between home-based workers, homeworkers and teleworkers	21
2.1	From ICSE-93 to ICSE-18: Advances in the identification of homeworkers in labour force surveys	34
2.2	Percentage of workers who are home-based, 2019	41
2.3	Distribution of home-based workers, by status in employment, 2019	42
2.4	Percentage of workers who are in home-based work, by status in employment (%), 2019	42
2.5	Distribution of home-based workers, by status in employment and country-income group (%), 2019	43
2.6	Percentage of working women and men who worked from home, 2019	45
2.7	Percentage of home-based workers and non-home-based workers who are women (%), by employment status and country income group, 2019	46
2.8	Distribution of home-based workers, by status in employment and sex (%), 2019	47
2.9	Distribution of home-based workers, non-home-based workers, homeworkers and non-home-based employees, by sector and region (%), 2019	48
2.10	Distribution of home-based workers and homeworkers, by level of education and income group (%), 2019	50
2.11	Distribution of home-based workers and homeworkers, by hours worked per week and gender (%), 2019	52
2.12	Share of home-based workers in informal employment in low and middle-income countries (excluding China), by region (%), 2019	55
2.13	Percentage of home-based workers, by disability condition	57
2.14	Percentage of children working, by presence in household of adult home-based workers, selected countries	59
2.15	The effect of adding probable homeworkers to the total number of homeworkers, Mexico, Argentina and India	61
2.16	Homeworkers (identified and probable) by gender (%), Argentina, Mexico and India	62
2.17	Homeworkers (identified and probable) by age group (%), Argentina, Mexico and India	63
2.18	Homeworkers (identified and probable) by weekly hours categories (%), Argentina, Mexico and India	64
2.19	Homeworkers (identified and probable) by occupation (%), Argentina, Mexico and India	65
2.A.1	Estimating home-based workers and homeworkers using labour force surveys	79
2.A.2	How variables are combined to estimate homeworkers in Argentina and Mexico	80
2.A.3	How variables are combined to estimate homeworkers in India	81
3.1	Real price per m ² of all apparel imported to the United States (US$), 1989–2019	93
3.2	Subcontracting chains in Turkey's garment industry	94
3.3	Main reason stated by enterprises for engaging homeworkers, Indonesia, 2015	99
3.4	Challenges in working with homeworkers, Indonesian enterprises, 2015	100
4.1	Example of a task for verification and validation	116
4.2	Spectrum of dependency among home-based workers on digital labour platforms	119
4.3	Growth in projects on online labour platforms, May 2016–September 2020	120
4.4	Geographical distribution of platform workers according to the services provided	121
5.1	Occupational structure of home-based work and home work	135
5.2	Earnings densities for India, Mexico and the United Kingdom (total earnings)	138
5.3	Hourly earnings densities: India, Mexico and the United Kingdom	142
5.4	Average hours worked per week and their coefficient of variation	146
5.5	Gender wage gap among employees, by place of work	156

Tables

3.1	Examples of piece-rate payments for different homeworking activities in Indonesia, 2015	98
4.1	Extent and types of monitoring of working time	123
5.1	Homeworkers and their earnings	136
5.2	Homeworkers' earnings from case studies	139
5.3	Decomposition of homeworker earnings gap	141
5.4	Regression analysis: Homeworker penalty	143
5.5	Demographic reweighting adjustment for earnings	144
5.6	Satisfaction with working hours	149
5.7	Share of women in home-based work and home work	151
5.8	Probit regressions for adult women (India)	153
5.9	Probit regressions for adult women (Brazil)	154
5.10	Child labour probit, India and Mexico	163
5.11	Access to social protection	166
5.12	Missed work due to illness	171
7.1	Key takeaways for international action	244
7.2	APINDO compliance checklist	250
7.3	Key takeaways for improving representation, voice and bargaining	253
7.4	Key policy actions for governments	266

Boxes

1.1	Debating and defining home work: Convention No. 177	17
2.1	Digital platform workers: How many are there?	35
2.2	Five types of questions used by surveys to identify workers who work at home	38
3.1	Managing subcontracting relations with homeworkers in Istanbul, 2019	102
4.1	F International: Women homeworkers and information technology	113
4.2	Clerical home work: The resurgence of legal debates	114
5.1	COVID-19 and teleworking	160
6.1	Key features of the European Framework Agreement on Telework	190
6.2	Collective bargaining agreements for the footwear area of the Riviera del Brenta, Veneto, Italy	195
6.3	Occupational safety and health regulations for homeworkers in Morocco	199

预览已结束，完整报告链接和二维码如下：

https://www.yunbaogao.cn/report/index/report?reportId=5_22563

