Note

UNCTAD serves as the focal point within the United Nations Secretariat for all matters related to foreign direct investment and transnational corporations. In the past, the Programme on Transnational Corporations was carried out by the United Nations Centre on Transnational Corporations (1975-1992) and the Transnational Corporations and Management Division of the United Nations Department of Economic and Social Development (1992-1993). In 1993, the Programme was transferred to the United Nations Conference on Trade and Development. UNCTAD seeks to further the understanding of the nature of transnational corporations and their contribution to development and to create an enabling environment for international investment and enterprise development. UNCTAD's work is carried out through intergovernmental deliberations, technical assistance activities, seminars, workshops and conferences.

The term "country" as used in this study also refers, as appropriate, to territories or areas; the designations employed and the presentation of the material do not imply the expression of any opinion whatsoever on the part of the Secretariat of the United Nations concerning the legal status of any country, territory, city or area or of its authorities, or concerning the delimitation of its frontiers or boundaries. In addition, the designations of country groups are intended solely for statistical or analytical convenience and do not necessarily express a judgement about the stage of development reached by a particular country or area in the development process.

Reference to "dollars" ($) means United States dollars, unless otherwise indicated.

Annual rates of growth or change, unless otherwise stated, refer to annual compound rates.

Details and percentages in tables do not necessarily add to totals because of rounding.

Preface

The World Investment Report, the seventh in this annual series, provides a comprehensive analysis and policy discussion of international investment issues. This year, the Report examines the interrelationship between transnational corporations, market structure and competition policy. This issue is particularly relevant because the liberalization of foreign-direct-investment regimes allows a greater presence of transnational corporations in host countries, with important implications for market structures and competition.

Major issues discussed in WIR 97 are:

- Global and regional trends as regards foreign direct investment, including its interlinkages with foreign portfolio equity investment.
- The impact of foreign direct investment on market structure and competition in host economies, as well as globally.
- The implications of the interaction between foreign direct investment, market structure and competition for investment and competition policies at the national, regional and global levels.

As countries liberalize their foreign-direct-investment regimes and firms increase their investment activities across borders, maintaining the proper functioning of markets assumes increasing importance. Competition policy has a key role to play in this respect. By focusing on the relationships between foreign direct investment, market structure and competition, and considering policy implications arising from these relationships, this year's WIR rounds out discussions in previous Reports. These dealt with the reduction of barriers to foreign direct investment and the strengthening of standards of treatment of foreign investors.

In discussing these issues, WIR 97 seeks to contribute to a better understanding of the role of foreign direct investment in the world economy and, in particular, its implications for developing countries.
