Foreword

I am proud to present the 2015 Annual Report of the United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime (UNODC).

In 2015 we marked the 70th anniversary of the United Nations, and celebrated the agreement of far-reaching and forward-thinking Agenda 2030 and its Sustainable Development Goals. Despite these great milestones, it was also a troubled year as the international community sought to respond to continuing conflict and the refugee and migration crises, and to the threats

The preparations for the United Nations special session of the General Assembly (UNGASS) on the world drug problem continued to put the spotlight on balanced approaches to issues of drugs and health, drugs and crime, human rights, security and safety, emerging challenges and sustainable development.

In all these areas under our mandate, UNODC supports countries through integrated country, regional, inter-regional and global programming, in line with results-based management
