Established in 1963, the United Nations Research Institute for Social Development (UNRISD) is an autonomous institution within the UN system that carries out multidisciplinary research on the social dimensions of contemporary development issues. Through its research, UNRISD stimulates dialogue and contributes to policy debates on key issues of social development within and outside the UN system.
Visit www.unrisd.org for full details.

The Commonwealth is a voluntary association of 54 countries that support each other and work together towards shared goals in democracy and development. The Commonwealth Secretariat executes plans agreed by Commonwealth Heads of Government through technical assistance, advice and policy development. It works as a trusted partner for all Commonwealth people as: a force for peace, democracy, equality and good governance; a catalyst for global consensus-building; and a source of assistance for sustainable development and poverty eradication.

Views and opinions expressed in this publication are the responsibility of the authors and should in no way be attributed to the institutions to which they are affiliated or to the Commonwealth Secretariat or UNRISD.

Wherever possible, the Commonwealth Secretariat uses paper sourced from sustainable forests or from sources that minimise a destructive impact on the environment.

About the author

Dr Rose Marie Azzopardi DP BA MA (University of Sussex) DPhil (University of Sussex) lectures on International Economics at the Faculty of Economics, Management and Accountancy at the University of Malta. Before taking up an academic career she worked for 19 years for the Maltese government in various departments and ministries. Her research interests focus on socio-economic issues, small states, regional integration and European affairs. She has experience in several international research projects, with a particular focus on policy implications for small economies in the European Union. Dr Azzopardi is a member of the Advisory Board of the International Small Islands Studies Association (ISISA).

Acknowledgements

Special thanks to the staff of the Gozo Public Library (Reference and Archives Sections) and the University of Malta Library (Melitensia Section), who were very helpful during the long hours spent researching, particularly old documents.

I would also like to thank the staff who were involved in this project at UNRISD and the Commonwealth Secretariat for their sterling work and dedication and last, but not least, the anonymous reviewers.
